2013

 UNGS PRESS

The Universidad Nacional de General Sarmiento (UNGS), founded in 1992, has a Press Department whose publishing policy aims at democratizing higher education in Argentina, disseminating field research on the issues affecting society, and fostering the search for alternative actions to overcome them.

UNGS Press offers more than 300 titles in its catalogue and publishes more than 40 new titles per year. The catalogue is structured around collections and series with the objective of disseminating the areas of research interest to our University. It also includes research findings and essays authored by Argentinean and foreign researchers who regularly collaborate with the various UNGS Institutes and Press Office.

In recent years, UNGS Press has successfully become one of the academic publishers –public and non-profit– widely distributed in Argentina. This has resulted from implementing a distribution policy through classic channels and consolidating a solid diffusion network of public Argentinean Universities.

Our challenge for the following years is to go international by welcoming first level authors and researchers from other countries. Our purpose is to publish and disseminate works that can contribute to build knowledge in the area of research interest to our researchers, academics, and students. In this sense, our objective is to consolidate the distribution of our books in the rest of Latin America and to strengthen a policy on co publishing with educational Institutions and publishers from other countries.

This catalogue offers an overview of our publishing house together with a short description of our main collections. At the end, there is a list of titles that hold potential for being translated into other languages. This catalogue is also an invitation for publishers and foreign universities to contact us to develop projects complying with a publishing policy towards fostering the circulation and development of ideas over publishing profit in the short term.
